

How Much Debt Do Singaporeans Have?

Description

What's your credit score?

Did you know that the secret to getting approved for a mortgage / personal loan / new credit card really lies in how good your credit score is?

I didn't know about this when I first started working and was happily applying for new credit cards. But after learning about the Credit Bureau of Singapore (CBS) and what they do, I realised that m any life opportunities are enabled only when you have a good credit score, because this gives the banks the reassurance that you will not default on your loan if they lend the money to you.

If you have a bad habit of paying off your credit cards late, you not only incur a hefty $60 late-charge fee, but you're also ruining your credit score, which may cost you the next time you're trying to get a loan. Unfortunately, many individuals are not aware of how their daily actions like these can add up to deprive them of opportunities in the future...until it is too late. Which is why I decided to write this post.

In normal circumstances, you can easily buy your credit report from the Credit Bureau of Singapore (CBS) for $6.42.

However, I recently got my credit report from CBS for free, thanks to SingSaver as they're currently giving away free credit reports as part of a campaign to help Singaporeans understand their financial health better. The report not only showed me my current score, but even reminded me of a credit card that I had almost completely forgotten about (I had applied for it with my mother over 4 years ago and have barely used it since).

Despite paying my bills late a few times, my rating is thankfully still an AA.

For more details on the description of various risk grades, please refer to the "Credit Report Explanation" section below.

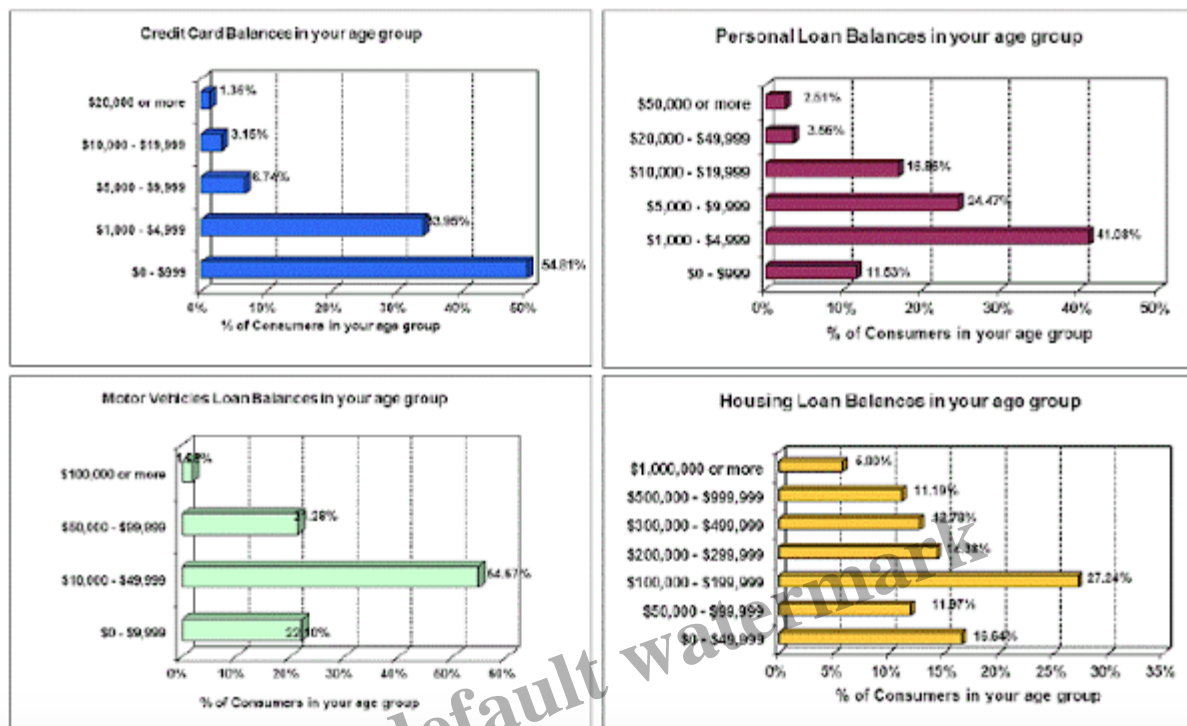

But what really surprised me was when I scrolled to the bottom of my report and saw that young Singaporeans in their 20s have a total debt of $378,651 on average! That's a lot of money.

Here's the breakdown:

Consumers in your age group (21 - 29) that use the following products have an average balance of:

Credit Card: $2,280
Personal Loan: $15,581
Motor Vehicles Loan: $30,848
Housing Loan: $329,944

3.61% of Consumers in your age Group had an overdue account in the latest month review.

Now, these figures on its own don't tell you a lot, so I've put them into context by comparing against what other age groups owe:

	21 - 29	30 - 34	35 - 39	50 - 54
Credit Card	$2,280	$4,015	$5,384	$46,341
Personal Loan	$15,581	$23,981	$40,674	$144,975
Motor Vehicles Loan	$30,846	$31,491	$34,606	$38,122
Housing Loan	$329,944	$283,826	$306,079	$365,596
TOTAL LOANS	$378,651	$343,313	$386,743	$595,034

Thankfully, it seems like Singaporeans have learnt to be smarter about their credit cards. Gone are the days when credit card companies earned huge money from rollover debts, consumers today have learnt to maximize the benefits of plastic cards without chalking up insane credit card debts in the 5-digit range. I hope you're among this smarter generation of consumers.

Personal loans are at a healthy range for my age group, presumably because mosts young working adults are still paying off their tuition fee loan (find out how to pay it off quickly and reduce the interest you let the banks earn from you here).

Cars continue to be seen as a status symbol – despite numerical proof that forgoing a car of your own can save you millions of dollars over time – and motor vehicles of our age group do not differ too much from the others. While I can understand if you need a car for your work and it directly gives you more income, I still, however, advocate not having a car if you don't really need one. (How about hiring a private taxi for the whole day instead?)

Finally, the bulk of our total loans are contributed by housing loans, which is only fair because this is the age where most of us start to buy our first home.

Even though those in their 30s are presumed to be wiser than us about their finances, you'll find that their credit card debts and personal loans are not in any better state. This is worrying, and we should start planning for how we can avoid becoming the next statistic. Of course, if they're paying off their credit card debts in time, then that's fine.

I'm missing the data for those in their 40s, so if any of you have this, would you please be able to share so I can update the table?

Oh no! What if my credit score is less than AA?

Nonetheless, your current credit score is poor, do not fret as you can still restore it to healthier ratings through prudent control of your expenses and managing your finances well!

I'll reserve this topic for another day but if you're interested, SingSaver has invited me as a guest speaker for their upcoming workshop and you can join me by signing up on this link.
