Miles vs Cashback Cards â?? Which is better?

Description

All my cashback aficionados raise up your hand.

This is a challenge. An ultimate showdown. The one youâ??ve been waiting for (since it was first mentioned on 2 Nov in this post, to be exact).

As some of you might have already heard, thereâ??s a crackpot in town known as Aaron Wong (MileLion), who has been going around calling us cashback folks â??foolsâ?• and â??noobsâ?•. Read his piece here: ST writer prefers cashback to miles, fluffy kittens everywhere die.

Heâ??s not the only one, by the way. Talk to a miles hacker and theyâ??ll most likely call you silly as well.

We need to prove him, and all his fellow miles-chasing addicts, wrong.

So join me on Thursday as we fight it out once and for all, like what mature adults do, and put this matter to rest. You can tune in via Facebook Live from the comfort of your own home.

Hereâ??s the event page with details on our upcoming debate.

2018 is just around the corner. You should definitely review your credit card strategy! Weâ??ve invited a panel of miles and cashback hacking legends to share their ideas.

Featured panellists:
â?? Budget Babe
â?? MileLion â?? ShopBack â?? Mileslife
â?? CardUp

Learn how to:
â?? Develop your card strategy
â?? Stack payments smarter (maximise both cashback and miles)

Best suited for:
â?? Working adults fresh to the cards world
â?? Couples who may be planning your wedding soon â?? If youâ??re planning to make a big purchase soon (eg. renovation)

Because hey, whoâ??s gonna stand up for the cashback folks?

(In case you canâ??t tell, Iâ??m only joking about The MileLion being a crackpot. Aaron and I are friends, as you can see from our collaboration posts here, here and here. He was also the first person I ranted to about my frustrations towards how the UOB Krisflyer campaign was being marketed by social media influencers, and we both wrote our comebacks right after.)

P.S. Let me know in the comments below which is your favourite miles or cashback credit card(s), and Iâ??ll try to touch on them during the discussion!

With love,
Dawn
