Review: Something Borrowed â?? A Fantastic Budget Fashion Find

Description

Thanks to Black Friday sales previously, I was shopping on a few websites and chanced across this brand called Something Borrowed.

Disclaimer: This is NOT a sponsored post. I encountered this brand on my own accord and was so impressed by their designs that I decided to share this little-known secret for every girl out there who is struggling with a tight wallet while wanting to look good at the same time.

Thereâ??s very little information about them, but it seems like they are a curated brand by Zalora and designed in-house with international designers. The description is vague, but seriously, who cares?

What I did care about, however, was the gorgeous designs at a very wallet-friendly price-tag. There are few brands who can convince me to part with my money for multiple of their items, but Something Borrowed easily did this because they had so many fantastic items at a fraction of typical retail prices!

They have over 2000+ items on Zalora (I couldnâ??t finish browsing all of them), offering a wide variety of styles for discerning shoppers.

I couldnâ??t believe my eyes when I saw their prices:

- Accessories were mostly priced from $3 â?? $15
- Dresses and other clothing mostly range from $11 to $40
- Shoes ranged from $11 to $60 for boots

Even the most expensive items in their line (jackets, coats, boots and evening dresses) will set you back by no more than $85. No kidding!

Just take a look at some of the gorgeous items I selected from their range:

I cannot resist their shoes.

I cannot believe this brand has been around since 2013 (?) and I didnâ??t even know about it! Adding this to my #budgetfinds and #budgetfashion tags on Instagram. If Iâ??m in the mood, perhaps Iâ??ll upload some photos of my outfits there as well.

For all you budget-conscious fashionistas, hereâ??s one way you can look like a million bucks while paying less than $100!

With love,
Budget Babe
