

Stop settling for 0.05% p.a. on your SRS funds

Description

For years, I've been trying to understand why 1 in 3 people choose to settle for a ridiculously low return of 50 cents for every $1,000 in cash that they leave idle in their Supplementary Retirement Scheme (SRS) account.

The number has since dropped to 1 in 5, but that is still a significant portion of SRS account holders who are willingly letting their funds lose purchasing value over the years to inflation.

Many people are quick to top up their SRS account in a bid to avoid paying a higher tax bill, so I've always wondered, why do they not put that level of urgency towards investing it?

Despite me repeatedly saying for years that leaving money in your SRS account is silly because it earns you only a meagre 0.05% p.a. of interest each year (a level that has not changed for the last decade and will likely not change in the near foreseeable future either), it befuddled me as to people were content to leave their funds idle anyway.

Until now.

I finally figured out that the problem might not be due to a lack of awareness (by now, at least), but the fact that while it takes only a few seconds to transfer funds into your SRS account, it takes a lot more time and effort to go and invest it.

What's more, for many people, it may not even be worth their time to do so, especially if their SRS funds are barely a substantial portion of their entire portfolio. In my case, my SRS funds constitute less than 5% of my overall investment portfolio, which makes the time and effort required to manage individual stock picks not as worth it.

So...what if you don't want to settle for a paltry 0.05% p.a. each year, and want to invest that in the most fuss-free way while paying as little fees as possible?

Well, in that case, robo-advisor Syfe's SRS portfolios might just be your answer.

How to manage your SRS portfolio vs. cash investments

While topping up one's SRS account is a great way to reduce your income tax bill (especially if you're in the higher tax bracket), you should remember that 50% of the amount you withdraw from your SRS account will be taxable. In contrast, any capital gains or dividends you make on your cash investments are not taxed.

Thus, some investors choose to adopt the below strategy instead:

- Cash investments for higher-risk, high-return equities
- SRS investments for lower-risk, more stable investments

If you don't wish to stress over how to withdraw to pay minimal taxes after you hit the statutory age of 62, then the above strategy can allow you to take advantage of the higher, non-taxable returns on your cash investments, while reserving your SRS portfolio for steady and stable investments instead.

After all, since 50% of your SRS withdrawals are taxable, you'd probably want to make sure that you do not end up negating the initial tax savings you enjoyed in your younger years.

If you're guilty of not having invested your SRS monies because you worried that you wouldn't be able to manage the portfolio, then robo-advisors like Syfe offer a convenient way to manage your investments for you.

By putting together portfolios offered by world-class fund managers such as Amundi, Dimensional and PIMCO, Syfe has simplified SRS investing and reduced the time and effort needed for SRS account holders to start investing.

Now, there's no more excuse for you to settle for just 0.05% p.a. on your SRS funds.
